The Veterans of Racing

After spending so many years on the track, horses like Citizen John truly are the veterans of the racing world. Whether they have won a million or only a few thousand dollars during their long careers, they have not only earned their title of “Racing Warrior”, but they have also earned their retirement.

Although crowds no longer gather to see them and their potential for a second career is often limited due to athletic wear and tear, they should not be tossed aside and forgotten. For years Racing Warriors have had a daily routine of individualized care and interaction with people. Their retirement years should include more than just a field.

At The Exceller Fund, not only is good pasture mandatory, but so is access to shelter for every horse. Horses that may need a blanket in the winter, or a fly sheet in the summer, get one. Fly masks and spray are a daily routine during the warm months. Another common sight during the summer heat is horses under fans. Meeting nutritional needs goes far beyond grass and hay; concentrates and supplements are also provided to keep them in tiptop condition. While hoof care, dental exams and vaccines are all routine, some horses require more specialized care.

Help us provide the very best care for these deserving Thoroughbred athletes that have EARNED their retirement!
